HARLEM CHORISTERS.

An audience, almost exclusively composed of resisents of the northern part of the city, heard a performance of Handel's "Messiah" by two organiza-tions from the same locality in Carnegie Hall last The choirs, which were united for the purpose, were the Harlem Choral Association and the North New-York Choral Society, both of which are under the musical directorship of Samuel A. Bald-Concerning them and their somewhat too ambitious undertaking it may be said that while it is wise, good and altogether commendable that the lovers of choral music in Hariem should mainsociety, or even more than one, for the cultivation of oratorio music, this fabt should not stop an expression of the conviction that they were not wise in making so early a public appearance.

Only on the theory that the concert was too precipitate can it be extenuated, for, in truth, there was no need of another poor performance of Han-del's oratorio. There is good material in the new body, and Mr. Baldwin gave evidence of the possession of skill as a choir leader, though he did not always sit firmly in his saddle while accompanying the solos; but the singers were not confident, and the more difficult choruses, like "His Yoke in Easy," were as poorly sung as at the recent un-

Not only did in a sanitarium at Danaville, this State, where it is levellest aspect, and its highest estate, but it is levellest aspect, and its highest estate, but it is levellest aspect, and its highest estate, but it heart failure. New-York concerts, and put upon his programme for the second number the new sonata by Brahms in F minor, op. 129, for clarinet and piano (the first of a set of two), and brought with him from Boston the first clarinetist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, M. Pourtsu, to piay it, with Mr. Arthur Whiting, of this city. They had an uncommenty grateful task in making known to New-York this latest work of the German master, for it is of a a rich burden of musical ideas. It is an outcome of Brahms's latter-day predilection for the clarinet as a participant in chamber music-a prethe same instrument with strings, that he has published in recent years-and, though it is an attempt in a field that has been little cultivated by composers, it is a singularly successful one, showing a consummate mastery in the treatment of the clarinet and the union of its peculiar and salient qualities with those of the piano. The result is frequently of a surpassing beauty in richness of tonal quality and plasticity of phrase, and all four movements are crowded with effects as lovely as work show Brahms at his best in the spontaneity of ideas, and the clarity and strength of their development. If there is anything recondite in the of ideas, and the clarity and strength of their development. If there is anything recondite in the sonata it is in the first movement, but this, as well as the others, is so full of beautifu, music as to cause some bewilderment to those who had been told that these clarinet sonatas were an evidence of Brahms's waning powers of invention and increasing reliance upon the merely formal devices of musicianship. Messrs, Pourtau and Whiting played the work with enthusiasm and an evident sympathy. M. Pourtau, in particular, distinguished himself as an artist of fine insight and remarkable technical accomplishment, his tone being beautifully warm and flexible, and his phrasing pialnty directed by a genuinely musical temperament.

The Tschalkowsky quartet is thoroughly characteristic of its author, though it cannot be set down as one of his most successful works. There are in it many striking ideas, carried out in his most original vein, and effects of a brilliant and unconventional sort, but there are likewise many waste places, and the unconventional sometimes degenerates into the merely fantastic and bizarre. The quartet is in memory of Ferdinand Laub, and there are several passages in which this purpose is smbodied, notably the slo v movement, with a curious recitative-like effect for the viola, as of an intoning of the office for the dead, and in a short, dirge-like code to the first movement. Mozari's quartet in G major closed the concert, and was payed with an exquisite delicacy and refinement.

PLUNKET GREENE.

Plunket Greene, the well-known basso, is to-day. His first appearance in New-York will be at the concert given by Henrich Zöllner at Carnegie Hall on the 19th of this month, and his first song recital will take place on January 28. Mr. Greene achieved his latest triumph in Berlin, where he sang at a concert at the Philharmonic, conducted by Villers Stanford, on December 39.

rare beauty, throbbing with vitality and fraught and other papers, was in a trunk in the sewingroom of Mr. Goldsmith's house. Then Mrs. Gold-smith's sister was married, and the contents of the trunk were taken from it, so that the trunk could be used. The valuable papers, including the will, were lost then, it seems; but it was thought by Mrs. Goldsmith that they were safe.

Mr. Goldsmith had read this will to several per-by Mrs. Goldsmith that they were safe.

Mr. Goldsmith had read this will to several persons, including his wife, a man in his office and the witnesses of his signature. This instrument gave all his estate to his wife.

Search was made, but the will and the other papers could not be found. A servant who had been in the house when the trunk was empired was questioned, but she did not remember having seen the papers. She sad that she "guessed they had been swept away with some trash." The loss of the insurance policies, one of them being of a beneficial order, could be remedied although Mrs. Goldsmith has had much trouble in establishing the claim to the money.

The Goldsmiths had no children, but there is a niece and three nephews, who, in the absence of a niece and three nephews, who, in the absence of a niece and three nephews, and entitled to a proportionate part of their uncless estate. The nephews are Frank L. Entwisie. Edward Entwisle and "Bert" Entwisle. Frank L. Entwisle is a lawyer at No. 183 Remsen-si.

It is now a question as to whether Mrs. Goldsmith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to all of her husband's estate, or smith is entitled to

The estate, which is small, is left to Dr. Van Kieck's widow, Neille S. Van Kieck. He leaves his medical and surgical instruments to Dr. James R. Latham, of No. 125 West Eleventh-st., New-York, who studied medicine under his instruction.

ELIZABETH KLAMP'S WILL CONTESTED. A contest was begun yesterday over the probate of the will of Elizabeth Klamp, who left an estate of about $29,000. She gave all her property, except $1,000, to her two sons, Philip and John Klamp, and her daughter, Elizabeth Berringer. A grandson, James Lyman, Ir., received $1,000, which was to be kept in trust for him. He filed objections yesterday to the will, through his guardian, John A. Poley, of No. 45 Broadway, alleging that Mrs. Klamp was unduly influenced by her children.

MONEY TO TEACH THE IRISH LANGUAGE. The will of Patrick Mullen, the gunmaker, who died recently at his home in Clarkson-st., Flatbush. was filed for probate in the Surrogate's office, Brooklyn, yesterday. The value of the estate is fixed at $25,000. William Vincent Farrell, a nephew, is to have the yearly income from $10,000 for life. Should Mr. Farrell die without issue the income from the $10,000 is to go to the Home for Aged of the Little $15,000 is to go to the Home for Aged of the Little Sisters of the Poor, this city. The residuary estate is bequeathed to Timothy. D. Sullivan, Lord Mayor of Dublin, Ireland, to be used in teaching the Irish language. Should the courts decide this bequest invalid, the money is to go to the Mater Misercordia Hospital, of Dublin, in memory of Mr. Mullen's sister.

John M. Farrell, a nephew of Mr. Mullen, will contest the probate of the will. died recently at his home in Clarkson-st., Flatbush.

A FINE SIGHT AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

GOVERNOR MORTON LEADS THE GRAND MARCH WITH MAJOR SLOAN-SUPERB DECORATIONS.

The Old Guard Pall is a social military fund tion which is looked forward to with much pleasure by a farge number of people annually. Every ball given by the Old Guard has been just a little more enjoyable than the one which preceded it. and the decorations have grown in elegance and in splendor every year until people thought that highest point had been reached. But the ball which took place at the Metropolitan Opera House inst night eclipsed all its predecessors in many re-spects. In the first place, it was a new departure to have the ball at the Opera House. For years it has taken place in Madison Square Garden, and iniscent air about the ball which was not in evi-thte feature of the evening. Major Sloan led, with Governor Morton on his right and General Ruger on his left. Following them came the Guard and their guests. It was a bear-fluid spectrate and received the applause of the hungreds of fair women who guests. It was a benefic! spectface and received the appliance of the hundreds of fair women who watched it from the boxes.

All in all the Cld Guard ball was a great success and a credit to the committee, although the officers of the 14th Regiment felt hadly at falling to receive invitations. Leavenant F. W. Sybel said, in explaining this apparent slight: "I know that the cards of invitation went to the 14th. We have as many good friends in the 14th as anywhere else. No slight was intended. I regret it very much, and the only way I can account for the matter is that the invitations in scarried."

TONY PASTOR'S NEW PLAN.

HE IS TO GIVE CONTINUOUS PERFORM-ANCES IN HIS THEATRE.

Tony Pastor has been converted. He has come to believe that continuous-performance houses are what the public wants, and he is going to have one. He is not going to build a new theatre, at habits of his old one. The managers who have interest for the last two or three years been conducting ROBBIT variety entertainments that never the habits of his old one. for the last two or three years been conducting for the last two or three years been conducting variety entertainments that never stop have got people into the way of expecting a good deal of show for their money, at least as to mere quantity. If they cannot go in the morning, take their luncheons with them and stay all day, they have a afternoon, January 8, at 2:20 o clock. show for their money, at least as to mere quantity. If they cannot go in the morning, take their luncheons with them and stay all day, they have a haunting feeling that they have wasted their Mr. Pastor never intends to encourage anybody to waste money, and so, on the twentieth day of this month, in his theatre, in the lower lefthand corner of Tammany Hall, he will begin a variety performance which will pause thereafter only when it is necessary to air the house and let the Attaches get a little sleep.

Mr. Pastor has been led to take this step solely by his keen observation of the conditions of the times. The name of Tony Pastor is better known than that of any other variety manager in the country. Through the thirty years of his career as a manager in this city he has established a reputation for giving the best and freehest variety entertainment to be provided. But he knows well that nobody can live on fame, and that, many as his friends and admirers are, he must give them the best in his power now and hereafter, as he has done heretofore, if he expects them to be admirers still. He has now become convinced that the popular and successful vauleville show of the hour is the continuous performance, and therefore he is going to provide it for the guests of his theavre. It is scarcely necessary to say that he intends to keep his enterrainments at the same excellent grade that he has been used to do. A reputation is worth something, after all, and Tony Pastor's reputation would guarantee that.
